To Our Valued Customers:

As the coronavirus continues to spread, I want to reassure you that Allied is monitoring developments on both global and local levels. Our focus is to protect our global workforce and minimize the impact to our customers while assisting communities where we operate by supporting precautionary actions.

Currently, no Allied employee has been infected at any of our global operations, and all 12 of our global manufacturing facilities are operating without production interruptions. Precautionary measures in existing preparedness plans were implemented to ensure our business continues to run as smoothly as possible during this time. We are monitoring the situation closely. If anything changes, we will alert impacted customers immediately.

Supplies of raw materials at all Allied facilities remain stable. Raw material suppliers in China are producing again after being down since the Chinese Spring Festival in late January, and there are significant levels of Chinese raw materials already in the US. The concern that quarantines may impact European raw material availability is being mitigated through proactive planning with key suppliers to ensure continued supply. Movement of materials within China and a backlog in ocean freight is a current constraint but supplies to Allied and its customers have not been affected. We are watching trade lanes and transit times closely to prevent delays.

Allied is working diligently to maintain the high level of service and supply our customers expect during this unprecedented time.

If you have any additional questions or concerns, please contact your local sales representative.

Sincerely,

Paul D. Jamieson
President
